FOLLOWERS OF CONFUCIUS IN CHINESE DISPUTE

Government Officials Claim Republican Doctrine Is Against His Teachings.

Peking, Oct. 29.—Confucius looms large in the controversy which is being hotly waged in China over the republican plan. President Yuan Shi Kai and his supporters are constantly quoting the ancient sage. Advocates of the republic are also using Confucius freely, and arguing that the change to monarchy would be a violation of a Confucian oath and consequently would discredit the teachings of the great moral leader in the eyes of the world.

Plans are now in preparation by government officials for the erection of a great bronze statue of Confucius in Peking. At present the ancient sage is represented in the various temples only by pictorial images of sacred tablets. These do not create the vivid impression of the great teacher which the Chinese officials desire, and movement is being made to place bronze statues of him in Confucian temples throughout the republic.

Mandates have recently been issued by President Yuan Shi Kai strengthening the position of Confucius' teachings in Chinese schools, and the society for the preservation of peace has constantly quoted the sayings of Confucius concerning the loyalty to the emperor in support of the restoration of the monarchy.

Four Confucian canonical books are taught in Chinese schools and no students who are not thoroughly versed in them are regarded as well educated. Quotations from these books, written nearly twenty-five years ago, are frequently used in nearly all governmental communications. The advocates of absolute concentration of government in an emperor are especially fond of Confucian excerpts as this: "To no one but the supreme head of the empire does it belong to disturb the established religious and social institutions, to introduce new forms of government, to change the form and use of language. At the present day throughout the empire carriage wheels all have the same standard form and size, all writing is written with the same characters, and in all the relations of life all recognize the same established principles."

Public speeches concerning the republican movement, letters to the newspapers and editorials in support of the restoration of the empire are filled with quotations concerning the five duties of universal obligations outlined by Confucius and the three moral qualities by which the sage said these duties must be carried out. The first of these duties are those between ruler and subject. Next are the duties between father and son. Then the duties between husband and wife. The fourth duties are between elder brother and younger, and the fifth duties are those in the intercourse between friends. The moral character and courage, in the order named, are the three moral qualities upon which Confucius laid great stress. Of these he says: "They are the three universal, recognized moral qualities of men. It matters not in what way men come to the exercise of these moral qualities, the result is one and the same."

"Some men are born with the knowledge of these moral qualities; some acquire it as the result of education; some because they find it advantageous to do so; some with effort and difficulty. But when the achievement is made it comes to one and the same thing."

The effort to strengthen the interest in Confucianism is apparent throughout the vernacular press of China. Scholars are urged to visit tomb at Chufou, and a more careful reading of his classic is advised. Young men are told that Confucius began gathering disciples around him and teaching the principles of good government at the early age of twenty-two. His services as minister of crime are reviewed, and the marvellous abolition of crime under his direction is emphasized. His great success as a teacher in the latter part of his life when he gathered three thousand disciples around him is stressed, and readers are constantly reminded of the enduring fame of this teacher who had the proper ideals of government.

ONE CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

The list of automobile accidents published day by day is a disgrace. Monday's newspapers with their report of Sunday morning and slaughter, sound like a dispatch from bloody Belgium.

These accidents occur from so many different causes, that it is hard to say what particular practice among reckless drivers is the more threatening. Very prominent among these causes, however, is the very frequent attempt made to pass another car while a third is coming in the opposite direction.

Few country highways are wide enough for three vehicles of any kind. Before trying to pass a machine or team, the driver should be sure that no one else is coming from the other way so as to bring the three together.

Some of these speed lunatics enjoy showing their ability to extricate themselves from a critical situation. It delights them to make a letter S between two machines coming in opposite directions, which threaten to nip them between the points of a pair of scissors. If such drivers could alone suffer, the world would be content to see them in a hospital bed, often to attend their funerals.

But unfortunately these scorchers are very apt to be driving heavy and powerful cars, which they enjoy showing off to what they suppose is a gaping and admiring public. The common result in the situation above described is that one of the outside cars is forced off the highway. If the bank is steep and high the machine turns turtle, and a merry holiday is turned to a day of tragedy.

Of course ordinarily the three cars all escape, by the skin of their teeth. Those whose safety was endangered hurl epithets, and then go their ways, and forget all about it. A man's number should be taken and reported to the proper authorities. There is too little action to follow up speeders.

While on his way to the Sheephead Bay Speedway at practice for the Election Day race, Johnny Attkin, a racing driver, was arrested and released on suspended sentence in Brooklyn, because his auto had no license plate.

TALLEST PITCHER IN BASEBALL SIGNED FOR NEW YORK AMERICANS

New York, Oct. 29.—The longest and thinnest pitcher that ever graced the center of any diamond has signed a contract to pitch for the Yankees for the season of 1916. He is the tallest player in baseball. We have referred to Edward H. Love, left handed pitcher, better known in baseball on the Pacific Coast as "Slim Love." He comes to the New York club via the draft route from the Los Angeles team. He is 6 feet 7½ inches tall.
The official averages of the coast league have not been issued as yet, but Slim has a good record. Up to the last week of the season the human telegraph pole was in 53 games. He had 21 victories and 13 defeats. Love will lead his organization among the regular pitchers in holding opponents to low batting averages. His opponents were at the bat 1,194 times and secured 292 hits, giving Slim a percentage of .219.

WOULDN'T LET STUDENTS GO TO FOOTBALL GAME AS LIVESTOCK KEEPERS

The committee in charge of Dartmouth "cattle special" which was being arranged to carry the students to the Amherst game tomorrow received its final set-back yesterday when it learned that the recent ruling of the interstate commerce commission regarding the shipment of students as "live stock" was applicable to the Dartmouth people.

The "On to Amherst" committee proposed as an evasion of the rule which forced Penn states to pay full fare to Princeton a few weeks ago, to place a crated pig in each car and the students were then to go along as caretakers for the piglets. It was a bright idea, but old Mr. I. C. Commission said "No, it cannot be so." Whether this latest check will deter the Dartmouth undergraduates from witnessing the Amherst game is very problematical.

METROPOLITAN SMART ALECKS

A correspondent from a suburban town writes as follows: "If those Smart Alecks on the big metropolitan newspapers would devote less space to burlesquing the news items sent in from villages like this, and more energy to getting news accurate, they would have more subscribers."

This correspondent goes on in detail one favorite way these big newspapers have of making their columns seem up to date. If they get hold of a news item from the country that seems interesting but rather old, they will print a date line on it so as to make it appear that it happened the day before the paper was published. It may be weeks or months old. That makes the paper look up to date, and not many people know the difference.

Still a newspaper can't fool people indefinitely. A paper that does that kind of thing over and over again will get a reputation for carelessness and worse.

The home town newspaper, published in the community where it gets its business, cannot afford little tricks. It realizes that every misstatement of fact, even though slight hurts the paper, and works 365 days in the year for accuracy.

Last Saturday's advertising brought a big rush at Bradford B. Smith's Sale. The Sale for Saturday of this week will be just as attractive and those attending will be well rewarded.—Adv.
